Executive Director's Letter

What are things that connect you to the people you're closest to? Are they part of your family? Did you go to school together? Are they colleagues or fellow churchgoers, perhaps? Maybe you met randomly and discovered you love or hate the same things. Whatever it is, it's probably something you have in common.

Well, what about the members of Prosperity Indiana's network?

As we're in the process of developing a new strategic plan, with a new executive director (me!) at the helm and new team members and board members in place, we've spent a lot of time of late talking about who we are, who are our members, and who we should be or become. And out of that has come some interesting debates.

What we know is that we've never had just one type of member. Our members have always come from different sectors – whether nonprofit, government or business. They've always come from across the spectrum of community economic development – meaning our members aren't all CDCs or shelters or banks or counselors or CAPs or United Ways or Habitats or private developers or or or ... So, what is it that connects us? Maybe it's the values that Prosperity Indiana upholds? (I hope that's at least part of it – something that I'll dive deeper on when we're closer to completion of our plan!)

But for now, I'm focusing on a more transactional question: When it comes to connections, do our members mostly come into our network because they can find like groups amongst it? Or do you come into membership because you want to interact with groups you wouldn't necessarily be connected to otherwise? Or is there some combination of the two? Which connections do you most value in our network? Let us know in this quick, one-question survey!

And speaking about connections across our vast membership, two of our greatest opportunities to connect each year are coming up in January. We will host our Statehouse Day on January 29 and our annual Summit on January 30! The Summit will provide solutions-oriented content that focuses on diversity and innovations to build capacity across the field to improve the lives of individuals, the performance of organizations, and the strength of our communities - and we need you there. Our membership wouldn't be what it is without you! So, please join us: To find what

Proposed CRA Reform Call to Action: Lunch & Learn Webinar

The Community Reinvestment Act is a landmark civil rights law to end discrimination that was once common in America's banking and housing markets. While some strides have been made, discrimination in lending persists and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency is taking comments on ideas that they have proposed that may substantially weaken the law.

Join Prosperity Indiana and the National Community Reinvestment Coalition (NCRC) on Wednesday, October 24 for a webinar discussing the proposed changes to CRA, what they could mean for low-and-moderate income communities in Indiana, and how to take action.

Congress Passes Short-term Funding for HUD/USDA, Looks to December for FY19 Bills

Despite budget negotiators working right up to the September 30 fiscal year deadline to pass Fiscal Year (FY) 2019 Transportation-Housing and Urban Development (THUD) and U.S. Department of Agricultural budgets, there was no final agreement on the spending package. Instead, Congress passed a continuing resolution, or short-term spending bill, to continue current FY18 funding levels until December 7. Find out more on our blog.

Know Your Rights: Hoosiers Living in Mobile Homes at Risk of Losing Their Homes

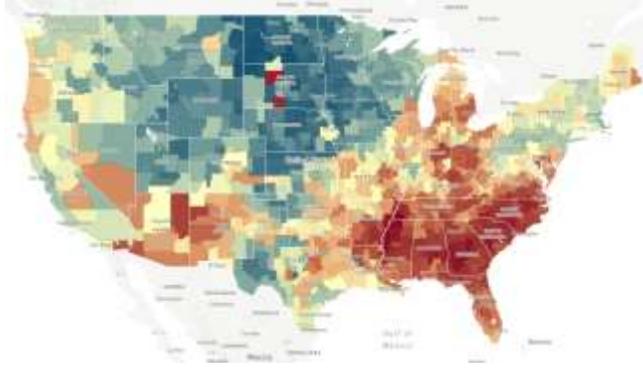

Personal property taxes must be paid on mobile homes yearly. If you owe as little as $25, your mobile home is at risk of being sold at auction. The first sale of this kind in the state will happen later this month in Lawrence County. Click here to learn more on our blog.

Prosperity Indiana member Indiana Legal Services, Inc. has created a brochure to help those living in mobile homes to know their rights and explain how to avoid sale. Access it here.

New Opportunity Atlas Maps How Location Affects Economic Mobility

Earlier this month, researchers from Harvard and Brown University released the Opportunity Atlas, a mapping tool that aims to address the basic question of how much location influences outcomes. The tool is comprised of U.S. Census tract-level data from IRS federal income tax returns and the 2005-2015 Census American Community Surveys (ACS) to evaluate income, parental characteristics, children's neighborhoods, and other variables.

JCHS releases 30th State of the Nation's Housing Report

The inaugural State of the Nation's Housing report, published by the Joint Center for Housing Studies of Harvard University (JCHS) in 1988, noted that the majority of Americans were well housed and some conditions have improved since then. More than 40 million units have been built over the past three decades, accommodating 27 million new households, replacing older homes, and improving the quality of the nation's housing stock.

Nevertheless, several challenges highlighted in the first report persist today. Homeownership rates among young adults are even lower than in 1988, and the share of cost-burdened renters is significantly higher, with almost half of all renters paying more than 30% of their income for housing. Increases in the median sales price of homes have outpaced growth in median household income for six straight years. Furthermore, the homeownership rate between black and white Americans is widening. Between 1994 and 2016, black homeownership rates increased just 0.3% while white rates rose 2.2%, widening the gap to 29.2%.

Prosperity Indiana's Response: "HPI wins court decision; county plans to appeal ruling"

After a 12-year appeal process, the Indiana Board of Tax Review (IBTR) ruled in favor of the nonprofit Housing Partnerships, Inc. (HPI), determining the organizations's ownership of scattered-site housing does qualify for property tax exemption. The county assessor's office decided to repeal the decision, which may force HPI to sell 11 affordable homes to pay off debt taken out to pay the taxes. Read more about the appeal in this article from The Republic and see Thrive Alliance's response in their press release.

Prosperity Indiana's Executive Director, Jessica Love, responded to the decision in this letter, pointing out the assessor's faulty logic that low-cost private landlords will be impaired by the exemptions, citing the Out of Reach data which shows that a minimum wage worker in Indiana must work 86 hours per week to afford a two-bedroom apartment at fair market rate.

"Prosperity Indiana hopes the IBTR's decision in HPI's case will stand and serve as a powerful precedent," Love said. "We urge the incoming assessor to look at the whole equation when weighing how to proceed, so HPI can continue serving the community's unmet needs."
